

Safeguarding Adults Process Flowchart

Feedback:

At each stage of the safeguarding adults process it is important to ensure feedback is given to the adult, Alerter and partners. Alerters are entitled to be given appropriate information regarding the status of the alert they have made.

The extent of this feedback will depend on various things (for example the relationship they have with the victim, confidentiality issues and the risk of compromising an enquiry). At the very least it should be possible to advise the Alerter whether their alert has led to an enquiry. Partners in provider organisations require feedback to allow them to continue to provide appropriate support and make staffing decisions.